Introduction

Durham University is a multi-cultural, multi-faith community that is committed to providing opportunities for its students to explore and follow their religious beliefs.

The University provides a number of faith facilities for its main religious communities of Christian, Jewish and Muslim students. We are happy to discuss individual needs if you have any special requirements linked to your faith. We provide support and advice through our Chaplains and Colleges to help students access faith facilities across the University and in the local area.

Durham University Chaplains are committed to welcoming and supporting people of all faiths, so please don't hesitate to contact them with any specific queries. Contact details for all Chaplains can be found overleaf and on the website at: durham.ac.uk/faithsupport

Many religions are also supported by societies of the Students' Union, all of which welcome new members. If there is not a specific society for your particular faith then you will find all the help you need to start your own with the Students' Union: durhamsu.com/groups

Many of Durham's Colleges have their own chapels, as identified on the map, and several Colleges provide organ scholarships: St. Hild and St. Bede, University, St. John's, St. Chad's and Hatfield.

A number of Colleges have Multi-Faith Rooms which can be accessed by students of all faiths and none, including Josephine Butler, St. Aidan's and Trevelyan Colleges.

Buddhism

See university website for details of regional Buddhist centres.

Christianity

Please see overleaf for further details.

Hinduism

See university website for details of regional mandirs.

Islam

There are dedicated Muslim Prayer Rooms on Old Elvet and at Grey College providing separate prayer spaces for male and female students, along with specialist ablution facilities. The Students' Union has an active Islamic Society. duisoc@googlemail.com

Judaism

The Students' Union Jewish Society hosts Friday Shabbat in the Shincliffe Room at St. Aidan's College, with the food prepared in the kosher kitchen. St. Aidan's Multi-Faith Room is also reserved on Friday evenings for the exclusive use of Jewish students. jewish.society@durham.ac.uk

Sikhism:

See university website for details of regional gurdwaras.
